When we first thought about the question, What is my cosmic address?, do you remember our very first frame of reference?
From school, we steadily expanded our frame of reference.

Talk in your groups to recall the larger and larger frames of reference we learned about as the course progressed.
• What is my cosmic address?

Review the vocabulary introduced in the course by referring to your index.

Also review the key points from each investigation and incorporate these ideas in your response to the guiding question.
Focus question

• Where are you when you are in science class?
Reflect on learning

• What do you know now that you didn’t know or imagine when you started?
Homework

Return in your notebooks to the questions you wondered about the Moon (Investigation 3) and solar system (Investigation 6).
Homework

• Which questions have been answered?
• Which questions are still remaining?
• What new questions do they have now?

You can research these questions for homework.
Planetary Science Course, 9.3: What Is Our Cosmic Address?